Misty Turco

Please make sure we are making the best decisions for now and the future. It is important to preserve good things and much easier to prevent harm than to try to fix it later after disaster strikes. Water quality is a matter of health, good stewardship of resources and benefit to all creatures who access it (man and animals). The river is enjoyed by children and adults alike (and all the animals in the area, who make the trek nightly to drink in dry spells). It is vital that it is kept safe and viable. This kind of access to water underground and above ground is a blessing, and should be managed as such. It is never something to treat lightly. Bad decisions have long-term consequences, just as good decisions do. We need to make sure those decisions are treated very seriously. Thank you for your attention to this matter.
