

Nicolas Fredricey

I recommend the most stringent review possible. Considering our ability to use clean and renewable energy, there is no great importance of being expedient to export coal to Asia, at the risk of U.S. citizens and countless others. Thanks for your consideration and thoughtfulness on this issue. What's the rush? Who's involved in this business who is also a politician, possibly having ulterior motives? I depend on you to make the right decisions for our planet.