

Chris Pinney

Would be a significant finishing-off nail in the coffin for migrating and rearing salmon, let alone many cultures of peoples health and well-being, quality of life and property. This cannot be a serious consideration, for there exists no justification for such an action, irregardless of it not being legal in so many laws and acts enacted to protect human rights and Threatened species. Just another waste of resources and money in order to enable a few more litigation actions...be the Unless at the state level and take control of the ecology standing against the federal blasphemy and kill it before it begins, please, please, please.