

Joana Kirchhoff

After the scores of years and millions of dollars that both Portland and Vancouver have been improving water quality, shoreline recovery and salmon recovery a short term investment in a dying industry (fossil fuels) is a reversal of efforts. Help those investors transition to the new fuel economy instead of supporting them in this last gasp. They will leave us with a mess to clean up, just as they always have. And climate change acceleration demands the just transition to clean energy for all of us.
