

Adam Howrey

The planet can't afford any more fossil fuel infrastructure being built. In order to maintain a liveable environment past 2050 or so, we must transition to renewable energy as quickly as possible. It makes no sense to put the short term profits of the fossil fuel industry before the long term welfare of the planet. This is not a drill, climate change is for real, and it's really scary.