

Deborah Rudnick

It is time to recognize that continued use of toxins in our aquatic environments is the antithesis of what we should be striving for in our relationship to these important natural resources. We have got to find a way of managing our shellfisheries that does not involve poisoning our waters.