

Jan Halliday

(Email Submission)

If the oyster industry fails because of burrowing shrimp, so be it. Find another way to grow them.

Spraying neurotoxin or insecticide on mudflats is irresponsible and has been a travesty for decades.

I used to write for National Fisherman and was appalled when I researched the Dept. of Agriculture's so-called "solution" in the 1980s.

Guess it's time to interest a documentary filmmaker in a new project. I presume there's a money trail here.