

Teresa Ferrari

I am dismayed and shocked that we must still be fighting against companies & corporations who can only see the value in their 'products' and the profit to be made. This view is shortsighted and does not consider long term health of our waterways, oceans, soils and air. We must not continue to use poisons. One long term view is to consider and believe that the cure for anything we face (human disease, unbalanced ecosystems, pollution) is already present on the earth and we simply need to adopt a new way of thinking and new systemic models. There are other ways to work within a healthy ecosystem to sustainably grow and harvest oysters. I oppose the use of Imidacloprid and trust that the correct action will be taken, one that does the least harm to the masses of species.

With faith,

Teresa Ferrari

CA resident

Part time resident on Tomales Bay, another 'oyster waterway'.