	I urge the Department of Ecology to strengthen the requirements in the Stormwater Management Manual for Western Washington in the final revision. In recent years the EPA has stated that stormwater runoff is a significant contributor to water pollution. I believe that as development continues in Western Washington and the state overall, run-off requirements must be broadened to include more construction projects.	Kate Lunceford
	I support the 17 detailed comments and rationale submitted by William Lider dated October 30, 2017. I think these are reasonable requirements, and we all must step up to preserving the water quality in Washington for the health of our streams, for the enjoyment of fishing and water recreation, for the safety of our aquifers, and to ensure the long-term viability of our salmon.
