

April Atwood

Federal dams must meet state water quality standards, including temperature. We must do all we can to ensure the survival of salmon who need these rivers to spawn and have been struggling and dying when the water becomes too warm. These permits are the first step towards bringing improved water quality to federal dams.