Regarding the VW settlement and the proposed use of the settlement funds, we see a proposal to "fund greener cars" by funding the installation of more electric vehicle charging stations in the state and the replacement of diesel engines on buses and other public vehicles. This may help some in the reduction of Washington State's air pollution. However, we think that a greater reduction of Washington State's air pollution will be realized by using some or all of the funds towards capital improvement infrastructure projects which improve the flow of traffic in areas which experience traffic congestion, producing excessive air pollution.
