I believe this report is well done and is headed in an appropriate direction to right the wrongs created by VW.

Of the three key opportunities listed: electric buses, ferries, and charging stations, I strongly support electric ferries and buses over charging stations for personal vehicles. As the need for charging stations grows, so will the incentives for businesses and other organizations to provide them. Businesses will not fund the electrification of our buses and ferries.

Increasing forms of public transportation that result in reduced use of private vehicles would help move us in a good direction also.
