Dear Reviewing Agency:

We are long time residents of Tacoma often noticing the different smells being emitted from the Port of Tacoma. As the Port continues to allow expansion of industries emitting toxic fumes and particles we are concerned that we are going backwards in air quality after many years of making improvements. My husband recalls the days of the yellow fog as they called it as children.

It is my understanding that there is no cumulative assessment being done on all these industries and their emissions. This is ludicrous. With that being said it makes no sense for an industry such as WestRock to be granted any exception or allowances for increasing toxic particles/chemicals into our air. No matter how they work the numbers to justify increasing production, this is not acceptable in today's society in our view. Please deny this request.

Thank you,
