

Jenny Bell

This should be closed down. This is a classic misdirection- "look - we want to improve things!" Air quality and human health is frequently put second to corporate interests. It's time for Tacoma air quality to come first. Zero tolerance for 'aroma of Tacoma'. What about the economic interests of home owners? And the economic interests associated with residents and their families health? 55 mw of electricity generated through burning 100 cubic yards of plastic every day? Calling that 'renewable energy' and touting it as an environmental bonus. Please. No more. It's time locals took a stand and not roll over and take this kind of environmental and human health degradation, a huge loss in $ sum for economic externalities- like health costs, drop in value of housing etc etc. Institute real time air monitoring now! That would be an upgrade. And would soon see that system taken out.