

Evaline Belluche

This project is not worth the additional pollution that will affect public health. It's not worth making folks sick to earn some company extra cash, especially when particulate matter is the only measurement taken in the port, and independently at that.