Air emissions are a major public health concern in Pierce County, especially NE TACOMA Residents. THE NE TACOMA RESIDENTS face huge health disparities - life expectancy rates in some areas are 28 years below that of our longest-lived neighbors*.

MY famiky thinks Ecology needs to reevaluate its rules and standards, and develop new regulations that consider cumulative impacts of new sources of emissions that are more protective of human health.

We urge Ecology to change how new projects are evaluated. I want Ecology to know you need to do more to protect our health!
