

Sylvia Shriner

Even though natural gas is less polluting than other forms of fossil fuels (when it's burned), number one, we need to not add any more CO₂ and especially methane into the atmosphere. Number two, when you add up all of the methane that escapes into the atmosphere from the extraction and piping process, natural gas is no better than burning coal. We have no time to waste to bring down our GHG emissions, so I am adamantly opposed to this for profit venture, which adds pollution to the Tacoma area and exacerbates the world's climate change problem.