

Ryan Swank

I strongly believe the Department of Ecology should reevaluate its rules and develop new regulations that consider the cumulative impacts of pollution that are more protective of human and environmental health. My family and 3 kids live in Tacoma, and what happens here impacts not only the city but also the planet. Ecology should be using the best available science in its review of these air pollution projects. They should require WestRock to offset all the global-warming emissions that are a result of this project.