

Dawson Smith

We need to be sure that if spills occur there are plans in place to clean them up as efficiently as possible. We need to move beyond oil, but until we do we must take every precaution to make sure we can clean spills up thoroughly and thoughtfully and minimize the impact. Companies that profit from the transportation of oil should be responsible for all costs.