I am happy to see the resurgence of endangered bald eagles along the Pend Oreille river on Highway 2 between Newport, Wa. and Sandpoint, Id. The emissions from the smelter with the prevailing southerly winds will destroy this habitat. What is the DOE going to do to prevent this from happening especially when this habitat is Idaho and not Washington? This alone should have triggered a NEPA study. So why are you continuing with a SEPA study? This is our national bird after all.
