

James Chandler

In this part of the world, we are always threatened by wildfires in our grasslands and forests. Many fires are sparked by the grinding of railcar wheel flanges against the rails. With the addition of fugitive coal dust on the rail bed and in the ambient air, this is a recipe for continuous firestorms. What is the DOE going to do to mitigate this threat?