I have lived now in Idaho for going on 40 years - It is a magical place - And I strongly believe it should remain that way - Mother nature had compromised the quality of living here (smoke from summer fires) but this process is natural and not within our control - When it comes to impositions to our environment that are self imposed, I question whether the governmental authorities governing the approval process of the smelter have a clear understanding of the potential calamity that could be caused by allowing the smelter to be built and operated - Please do not allow this potential for serious negative impact to our local environment to happen - Thanks - Sincerely - Steven Lazar
