

Dwight Rousu

It is critical to the point of being existential to reduce greenhouse gases to the maximum degree possible. Heated air and heated water threaten to extinguish all higher forms of life on land and sea. Vehicles are a significant fraction of the sources of greenhouse gasses. The planet, and those parts of the planet we control, should replace fossil fuel vehicles as soon as possible. The proposed vehicle requirements and oversight are needed sooner, rather than later.