With the modest amount of electric cars we have now we barely have the electricity to meet existing consumer demand. CA is re-commissioning a nuclear plant to attempt to avoid blackouts. If you are concerned about the environment why promote vehicles that will use batteries produced with rare earth elements mined by China where there is zero concern about the environment. There is zero chance of meeting the demand for cars that this bill would force for electric cars. Very short sighted attempt at solving the problem. Also this is very regressive bill. Most lower and even middle income families cannot afford the price tag of these vehicles.
