

Marcus Acosta

You are asking too much for the average person on fixed incomes to buy electric cars without the infrastructure to provide more power plants. If you were truly serious about this, you'd be building next generation nuclear power plants to produce enough electricity.