

Julie Hiebert

It is unfathomable why WA would want to enact such a law - to ban purchase of gas-powered vehicles - especially with no plan to help people purchase, maintain and address the COST of electricity. Electricity is not cheap! For days each year I am without power because of wind storms - no one has even addressed the cost to create/maintain charging stations, which are not free. The battery life of electric cars is so limited. The cost to produce is untenable. Source materials for them has not been researched for the danger to the environment. It is well known that their batteries are extremely hazardous for firefighters. Do not pass this law. It seems driven more by politics than logic.

No one in this state has thought this out. Do not pass this law. To pass a law like this with no actual plan is stupid.