

Sandra Shultz

No. This is unrealistic and doesn't help at all. These batteries pollute the environment when discarded. The materials to make them are imported from enemy countries and extremely expensive. And last but not least, it will create more harmful emissions from fossil fuel driven electricity sources to charge these vehicles and the grid will not be improved enough to handle the charging. This is a no brainer!