

Jacob Deakins

The very fact that this has been proposed is asinine. There's very little infrastructure in place, it is likely not applicable and/or practical. There is no such thing as a zero emission vehicle as the energy has to come from some where. Instead of mandates how about we continue to incentivize, innovate etc.