

Sam Sanders

I completely oppose this. If electric cars are the panacea to our problems, then the market will see it happen without government mandates. This governmental action will raise costs, increase mining in countries with little environmental protections, and create further instabilities in our already precarious power grid. I see it as the Washington ruling elite making their dream fantasy come to life on the backs of the working class in this state. California is a mess. Please don't follow them down the same oppressive rabbit hole.