

Eric Wallin

If electric vehicles are such a great deal, why do we have to coerce people to buy them? This new law is a nonsensical virtue signaling destruction of the US economy. 61% of US electric power is derived from fossil fuels. The self-righteous EV user is, in the end, powering his car with natural gas or coal. The current electric grid is simply not capable to comply with this law. Further it places us at further dependence on China. Enough lunacy, postpone or kill this bill.
