Please put out an explanation as to WHERE you will get all this extra electricity. Since WA state has basically banned the use of natural gas you are already putting a strain on our electrical infrastructure. Heat pumps in the eastern Washington climate are NOT efficient so people will be forced to increase their use of space heaters (a further drain on the electrical grid) or crank up their wood stoves or fireplaces. Now you want to model this electric vehicle law on California- so as soon as you put it in place are you going to ask people NOT to charge their cars like California did as well?
