

Richard Rigby

I heartily agree with, support, endorse and encourage the adoptions of these rulemaking measures. Industry leaders and scientists alike generally agree on the increasingly urgent need to combat environmental degradation and ecological disaster by taking just these kinds of bold but still woefully small steps to improve air quality and protect the health and safety of future generations. (Increasingly efficient and affordable electric-powered transportation will be an adaptive yet not final solution.) Let Washington state, in partnership with California and other states, help lead the way in this important effort.

P.S. Yes, I recently bought my first plug-in car - used, not new. And I love it!