

Dan VanderPol

Please get rid of this rule. Drive electric sales by making them make sense financially and by making sure it is easy and quick to charge. Let consumers decide what is best for them. There is also a strong argument to be made that cradle to grave electric cars are not any more environmentally friendly when you mine the battery materials in foreign countries and really have no plan on what to do with the cars when the batteries no longer hold a charge.