My comment is simple: we face the gravest threat to human (and other) life since the advent of nuclear weapons in the form of global warming. The only way to combat it is to remove greenhouse gas-producing products and activities. As with many economic activities, the free market will not respond rapidly enough on its own. Rules and regulations that push us rapidly to a greener economy are extremely important mechanisms to get us to a carbon free economy. Please don't let the fossil fuel industry twist the Washington state government in order put its short term profits ahead of the survival of Earth and the beings that live on it.
