

Ray Michlig

Adopting a California emission is not a solution to the issue. Just as crazy as shutting down oil production on Joe Bidens' 1st day in office, after as a candidate said "we will phase it out over time"! In the haste to "Do Something" for climate change, nobody wants to look at the downside of the actions. Biden can blame it on Russia, but the decline of America can be traced directly to production of energy shut off in January of 2021. To make electric cars requires a lot of energy, mining, and processing done elsewhere in the world will NOT be done as clean as America could do. It then needs to be shipped here. Batteries are certainly not environmental products. Even if they have a functional life of 10 years, where will those batteries be buried they are certainly not 100% recyclable?

Why the push on electrical vehicles prior to having the infrastructure in place? The power grid cannot handle the additional load of private, and commercial charging stations, it can barely function in California as it is!

Wind and solar cannot provide the power for California, or Texas as evidenced over the last 2 years, not now, or ever for us as an entire country. Without hydroelectric, coal, fossil fuels, and nuclear currently running the bulk of the American grid we would be in a panic like Europe is now gearing up for. People will start using fireplaces to reduce electrical bills.

Following the elections in November, I believe you will find support for the Green New Deal, and the policies you have been pushing will need to be reversed by the "voice of a large majority from the people of America.

Fossil fuels make up an estimated list of 6,000 products, significantly more than just fuels, oils, greases, natural gas, plastics, insulation, tires, asphalt, medicines. those prices are ALL increasing for consumers today. You are impacting all of America, not just the oil industry. Food production, travel, employment, stock market, housing, along with all businesses, not to mention the small businesses that closed due to the Covid shut down, and will never return.

You have been voting to support, and cause this inflation, do not continue with this decline of America.

You are creating slaves of the American citizens, if you think we will own nothing, and be happy with that.

Those rules must apply to all of you as well. There can be no rich people anywhere in the world, no private property, no estates, no private islands, no gated communities, no oligarchs, no corporations, no businesses, no private armies, no armed body guards.

Have you really thought about this Utopia, that you are pursuing?