

Andy Meyer

Electric vehicles are not the answer you are looking for. Too costly for the average person. They take too many resources to produce and when you add up the carbon used to build one it takes on average 90000 miles of driving that car just to offset that carbon it took to build. That's when using a carbon free electric source.