

Sean Lewis

This is nothing more than another disgusting, massive, liberal agenda-driven grab for more more governmental power and control. Washington State's contribution to the world's carbon emissions is extremely insignificant — statistically ZERO. (And politicians of course deny that "climate change" is a NATURAL occurrence — but never let a made-up crisis go to waste, right?) This further infringes UNNECESSARILY on our freedoms and liberties, and will be massively expensive, overall, on citizens and businesses. (Not that that was ever a concern of state politicians in the last three decades.)

Allow the FREE MARKET and CONSUMERS to adapt and change NATURALLY to new technologies like this, without government FORCING people and businesses to change (I think there's a word for that...).

By the way, have you done an environmental impact analysis of what the EV battery manufacturing process does to the earth? It's INCREDIBLY harmful.

Remember FREEDOM and LIBERTY?
