

Jeff Smith

The government makes a feel good policy without having a plan to adopt it without the infrastructure to accomplish it. We saw last week where the Governor of CA was begging for citizens not to plug in their cars that would overwhelm the power grid. WA is closing coal plants without any plan to replace the power. Nuclear is the answer, but that makes too much sense. Like all public comments in the State, the decision is already made, it's just a futile exercise to oppose the political power base..

I am now 69 years old and live in a rural area. I've had to go back to work to pay my property taxes. I travel and drive to Seattle which is 130 miles one way. I can't afford a new electric car, nor have the ability to wait in line to have it charged every day.