

John Middaugh

With rising fuel prices, we don't need a knee-jerk energy approach! What we do need is a realistic transition to safe and dependable energy resources. Surely, elimination of the snake River dams is not the answer, when they provide the most natural energy available during this time of dependable natural resource energy! It's time for a realistic energy approach which optimizes the diminishing point of return of each of our energy resources!