Why is it that the language in the governors message only states %, as one has learned % of what? Why is it we are following California, are they better then us, have done better research, or is it political in that they are fully Democratic, and in a recent weekend asked that residents not charge their electric cars...

Unfortunately, when the state asks one to believe the ecology resources department I personally find it hard to do given previous mis-truths published on their web site, and fact that in talking with people they seem not to do scientific research of the basic kind. (stating that plastic bags are toxic) Is there a report that states that the electrical grid can support 400 amps power to each house.
