I think this is the most ridiculous thing I've ever read. Power plants have to use coal to make these batteries not to mention the weight of these batteries and the weight of the vehicle puts a lot more wear on the tires making it even more expensive to own one of these stupid cars. We also don't have the capacity for everyone to have electric vehicles. If you think people are going to give up gas powered vehicles that allow them to go wherever they want, to instead get an electric vehicle that at any time the government can shut down the power grid, you're crazy. This is stupid and not at all a smart move.
