I wish all the politicians in our state that can't make a decision for themselves would move to California if they think they are doing such a great job there. Next you control freaks are going to tell us we can only take a sh** on certain days of the week. You want all cars to be electric. Well how is that going to work when you democrats are supporting the breaching of the dams. Where are you going to get all the power to run these cars? California does not have enough electricity to run the houses how are they going to support electric cars? We will be in the same position. Pull your heads out of your a** and get back to reality.
