

Luis Zepeda

I think that Ecology's definition of overburdened communities is too narrow. Perhaps having an additional method of identification through a self-nominated process could allow communities overlooked by the current criteria to be recognized?