

Dear Washington State Department of Ecology,

Thank you for the proposed restrictions on toxic chemicals in product categories such as carpets and textiles, electronics, and personal care products. In many cases, adoption of rules would make Washington the first state to ban the chemical class in the named product category.

We are all exposed to toxic chemicals like PFAS and phthalates in products we use in our daily lives. A recent study tested breast milk from 50 Washington mothers and found PFAS in 100% of the samples. This is an urgent crisis that must be addressed immediately. Washington residents deserve to know that the products they use are safe and free from toxic chemicals that impact our health and pollute the environment.

I support the proposed restrictions in all product categories as an important next step in achieving this goal.

Sincerely,

64 community members:

- Andrew Rosenthal
- Anjali Aggarwal
- Barbara Blackwood
- Barbara McMichael
- Bri V.
- Caridwen Spatz
- Cathleen Burns
- Chris Landback
- Christine Chapman
- Cornelia Teed
- Dave Janis
- Daniel Henling
- David Winiecki
- Derek Benedict
- Diane Horn
- Dorothy Jordan
- Doug Faust
- Elizabeth Johnson
- Elyette Weinstein
- Gail Ptacek
- Glen Anderson
- Heather Murawski
- Hillary Lipe
- Ione Rowe
- Izaak Koller
- J. S.
- Janice Holkup
- Jayme Jonas
- Jo Harvey
- John Birnel
- John Thompson
- Justine Kamionsky
- Kevin Gallagher
- Kristin deLancy
- Kristin Stewart
- Lara Hansen
- Lara Lorenz
- Leigh Bangs
- Lemoine Radford
- Lorraine Johnson
- Marco de la Rosa
- Marcy Grantor
- Mari Jalbing
- Marie Milo
- Mark Bradley
- Martha Olsen
- Mary Jane Engh
- Mary Lou Dickerson
- Max Sutlin
- Ondine Eaton
- Patricia Coffey
- Patricia Page
- Peggy Butler
- Rebecca Burke
- Scott Fortman
- Sharon Chen
- Shary B.
- Susan Hampel
- Susan MacGregor
- Terri Smith-Weller
- Toniann Reading
- Victoria Urias
- Wally Bubelis