I'm writing to say that there must be NO DELAY in effectively and fully dealing with the waste encapsulation and storage. The risks of delay, given state of the current storage facilities and the dangers of having a "chernobyl-like" event are too grave. For heaven's sake, the money spent now will be a pittance of what's required if there's a delay, an exposure event occurs (which is likely), and what evolves cannot be mitigated.

Yours truly, Judy
