My understanding is that the facility to turn Hanford waste into glass (glassification) is ready for operation. I am opposed to transporting liquid wastes on our highways when we have the technology to turn it into glass before shipping. Why would we have spent all that time and money building that facility beside Hanford and then not use it to protect the public? I do support moving the glassified nuclear waste for storage to places without danger of contaminating ground water, or any bodies of water. If those are in other states, so be it.
