Michael Freeman

Mister Pollet’s, Mister Pollet’s comments raised an issue with that central storage facility. It's requirements are clearly laid out to include concentration of the contaminant. A careful reading of the building 324 removal plan called for the gross excavation and transport of the radioactive cell containing materials in it. Certifying that the radiation at the outside of that Entombment would meet requirements for transport. But clearly the material inside that did not meet that concentration limit. So I'd like to understand how the stated concentration limits are being met by that central disposal facility. And that's it.