

Pete Stoppani

greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions must be assessed onsite, as well as upstream and downstream—meaning that for a new fossil fuel project like a pipeline, emissions from the point of extraction (often via fracking) through distribution (and the leakage that often happens there) to use by the consumer should be considered.