

Luke Marshall

There should be no new permits given out for open net pens. All current permittees should be required to offset their environmental impact by cleaning waste from the ocean floor and offering facilities and services to restore native fish populations.