Andrea Linton

Dear Director Sixkiller:

Thank you for starting to plan for sea level rise in these shoreline rules. Right now they still let new and rebuilt structures sit too close to today's high tide line. As the sea rises, that land will flood more and more - putting homes at risk and pushing owners to build hard seawalls that wipe out salmon beaches. Please keep new building back from the water and plan for future floods, storms, and waves. Protecting people and salmon go together.

Andrea Linton, Greenbank